Her Story

Yemi's story is that of determination, courage, and perseverance.

This wife, mum of 4 and Glam'ma of two grandsons was born and raised in a polygamous home where her father had 7 wives and 27 children. She is number 16. Her mother was the last of the 7 wives with 6 biological daughters, 4 stepdaughters, but no son. Her mother raised 10 girls and was told by her husband's family that the 10 girls would never equal 1 boy, that they would amount to nothing, and be nobodies who will all end up on the streets of Lagos as prostitutes. Yemi was only 13 years old when she heard those words. Those words became the motivation for Yemi's determination to be somebody.

Yemi believes that: "NOBODY has the right to tell ANYBODY they cannot be SOMEBODY, and ANYBODY who is determined to be SOMEBODY can be".

Against all odds, Yemi turned the words of her father's family around to make her life meaningful and impactful. With nothing but a dream to be somebody, a determination to discover her purpose and an openness to embrace possibilities, Yemi built valuable life skills, learnt to recognize, take, and use opportunities well and is now paying it forward through her people-building programs that change lives positively across the globe.
